John O'Connor is Loving Life at the O'Connor Group

By Mark MacDonald

John O'Connor says he has oil in his veins. His father Tom did in Australia, and so does John's son, Shane. That's not surprising, as they've all grown up in the automobile industry, and almost everything they do in terms of business revolves around wheels.

Under the O'Connor Group umbrella are: O'Connor Chrysler, O'Connor RV Chilliwack, O'Connor RV Langley, O'Connor Collision and Glass, O'Connor Towing and O'Connor Rapid Lube. "I've tried to maintain a close relationship between all the businesses, so that one helps the other," says O'Connor.

Business is jumping, literally and figuratively, as all O'Connor logos feature a kangaroo, in recognition of John's Australian roots. "We've maintained a kangaroo as part of our logo, which is on everything that we do," he says. "It's a little identifier that ties us to our heritage." Business has been strong. "It's fantastic," he says. "Our growth has been quite fascinating. It's been steady, and it's all been fun. I love what we do."

O'Connor's father was an automobile dealer in Australia, and John incorporated his first company as O'Connor Motors Ltd., to honour the name of his father's business. John was a field manager for North Queensland for the Ford Motor Company before migrating to Canada in 1976, where he served as BC Sales Manager for Toyota. He managed to purchase Chilliwack's Toyota dealership in 1976. Then in 1979, he acquired the Dodge franchise for Chilliwack, and O'Connor Chrysler was born.

"We were also selling RV's from the dealership, small motor homes - Little Chiefs - which were built in Chilliwack," he recalls. "The RV business continued to progress and develop, and we had to find a new home for it." That's when they moved O'Connor RV to Yale Road, which runs adjacent to the freeway in Chilliwack. He bought the property with no money down, along with "strong promises about payments, and commitments," he says. "It's great when people believe in you, that you will keep your promises."

Like most every business person in BC, O'Connor found it rough sledding through the recession of the early 1980's. "There was a fair amount of stress," he recalls. "There was wild inflation, with interest rates at 22%, and no profitability." They added a body shop, and now O'Connor Collision is 20 years old. It's been so successful that the O'Connor's are adding another 14,000 square feet to the 8,000 square foot existing building. "Architecturally, it's going to look great," he says. "The new design will re-enhance the old, and incorporate a totally new building that will be able to service cars, trucks and RV's with offices and staff facilities."

O'Connor entered the tow truck business six years ago, and today, the O'Connor Towing fleet includes seven vehicles and two highway tractors.

Along the way, O'Connor purchased another RV Dealership on the Langley by-pass and O'Connor RV Langley has developed and grown for 12 years.

The O'Connor Group has 120 employees, and John is pleased to note that 46 have been with the company for over 5 years and 24 for over 10. "I think it's pretty amazing," he says. "We try to cultivate an environment where people like to work, and where they excel beyond their expectations." "If I make it a place where I love to work, I think they will love it too."

John's son Shane has worked in the vehicle business almost all his life. He started at the Collision Centre, was General Manager of the Langley RV store and then moved to Chilliwack to become General Manager of O'Connor Chrysler and Vice President of the Group. Plans are in hand to expand the Chilliwack RV Centre. Larger service facilities are a necessity with the market growth. The stronger Canadian dollar has dramatically improved the price of new recreational vehicles. Affordability at the factory level of pricing is driving the sales to new unimagined levels. Canadians are having fun buying and using RV's and O'Connor RV plans on being part of this great future.

RV Regulations

Maximum Length		Vehicle Combination		Max Height	Max Width	Passengers in Towed Vehicle	Passengers in Seat Belts	Propane on While Travelling	Passengers Allowed in Truck/ Camper
Motor Homes	Towables	Max Length	No. of Units
14m	12.5m	20m	2	4.15m	2.6m	No	Yes	Yes	No

Driver's License Regulations

Thanks to a reciprocity agreement between the provinces, if you are properly licensed in your home province, you may drive in other provinces or states without worry. You do not need to meet the qualifications for every other jurisdiction you visit in your travels. British Columbia permits the operation of any two-axle vehicle including cars, vans, trucks and utility vehicles. You may also operate motorhomes (including those with more than two axles) as long as the trailer being towed is 4,600 kg or less. Above this weight you will need a Class 4 or Class 5 license with a heavy trailer endorsement (Code 51).

British Columbia Trailer Brake Requirements

- Gross trailer weight of 1,400 kg (3,080 lbs) or less - Brakes are required if the trailer and its load weigh more than 50% of the licensed weight of the vehicle towing it.
- Gross trailer weight of 1,401 kg (3,081 lbs) to 2,800 kg (6,160 lbs) - Brakes are required, including a breakaway brake.
- Gross trailer weight of more than 2,800 kg (6,160 lbs) - Brakes are required, and the trailer brakes must be capable of being applied by the driver independently of the towing vehicle's brakes. A surge brake does NOT meet this requirement. A breakaway brake is also required. Brakes are required on all axles.

The sole exemption to this rule is for a 3 axle house trailer, in which case brakes are only required on 2 of the 3 axles.

Towing Dolly Brake Requirements

- Gross weight of dolly and motor vehicle carried is 1,400 kg (3,081 lbs) or less.
- Brakes are not required on the dolly if the net weight of dolly plus (+) the gross weight of motor vehicle carried plus (+) the gross weight of tow vehicle equals (=) less than the gross vehicle weight rating of the towing vehicle.

- Combinations other than the two outlined above require brakes on the towing dolly. Brakes are not required on the motor vehicle being carried by the dolly.

Tow Bar Brake Requirements

- Motorhome and Towed Motor Vehicle - If the towed motor vehicle has a gross vehicle weight of less than 2,000 kg (4,400 lbs) and is less than 40% of the gross vehicle weight rating of the motorhome, brakes and coordinated brake control are not required.
- Commercial Vehicle with GVWR over 5,500 kg (12,100 lbs) and Towed Motor Vehicle - If the aggregate weight of the combination does not exceed the GVWR of the commercial vehicle brakes are not required on the motor vehicle being towed.

- Other Combinations - If the combination is not included in the two situations outlined above, brakes are required on all wheels of the motor vehicle being towed in the same manner as trailer brake requirements.

General Brake Requirements

- Brakes with which a trailer is equipped when applied must be adequate to maintain control of the trailer; when applied must not affect the direction of travel of the trailer.
- Breakaway Brake Must automatically apply when the trailer separates from the tow vehicle and when applied must be capable of remaining fully applied for at least 15 minutes.

Detached Trailers

- No person shall park or leave a detached trailer at any place on a highway unless the wheels are locked so that the trailer will remain stationary at that place

So What is RVing?

2 Planning an RV vacation is easier than you might think.

Recreational vehicle (RV) owners know that vacationing in an RV offers more value for the dollar than almost any other vacation. Instead of staying in hotels and dining in restaurants, "RVers" travel in ease and comfort, knowing that they can truly enjoy their vacation on the road without the hassles.

There are two basic types of RVs - motorized and towable. Motorized RVs, such as motor homes and camper vans, come equipped with all of the features found in standard passenger vehicles, such as power steering and fuel-injected engines. Most motor homes include all of the comforts of a modern home, such as air conditioning and multi-speaker stereo system - some even feature a central vacuum and built-in safe for storing valuables.

Towables require a separate vehicle for travelling on the road. If you own a pick-up truck, van, sport utility vehicle or even a full-size car, you're already set.

While you're shopping for an RV, don't forget to look for the two seals from the Canadian Standards Association (CSA) and the Canadian Recreational Vehicle Association (CRVA). These two organizations work together to ensure the highest construction and safety standards.

The best way to determine the ideal RV for you is to first consider how many people you'll be travelling with and for how long. Discuss it with your sales professional, who will be able to give you expert advice on what size and type of RV is best suited to your family's size and budget.

RV camping is fast-paced fun but it's also a lesson in living with nature, working together as a family, sharing and giving. You can visit museums that will spark the kids' interest in dinosaurs or space travel, watch the tides at the seashore or learn how to start a rock collection. The options are almost limitless when you're vacationing in an RV. As ages go up, so do opportunities to savour travel's pleasures, spend time with grandchildren and make new friends.

Wherever you decide to visit on your excursion, you'll appreciate the comfort and convenience of travelling with an RV and making your house on wheels into a home on wheels.
